Both have made of political opinion follow them wherever their paths may lead. Although born in Flemingsburg, Judge Morrow was reared and educated in Danville and some of the fondest recollections of his life are associated with the "Holy City." Upon the bench he has been judge indeed. The humblest practitioner, if he was in the right, has had as good a chance as the most eminent one were driving a fiery horse to a cart when and no litigant or prisoner at the bar can he ran away and dashed into the pool, truthfully say that all the law permitted and nothing more nor less has been given him. The "wisdom men" who have criticised his rulings do not hesitate to criticise the court of appeals or the Supreme Court of the United States and their criticisms only showed their ignorance and only caused a pitying smile, poor things. Capt. Herndon's course as a public prosecutor has been fearless manly, honest and capable. He sought the conviction of no one if his judgment told him he was not guilty. He prosecuted as it was his duty to do; he never persecuted. The old 8th district, now soon to be no more, has not been the worse for the presence of either of the gentlemen referred to.

His letter accepting the democratic nomination for president of the United States is like all of Mr. Cleveland's efforts, clear, straight forward and unequivocal. It says what it means and means what it says. There is no attempt at tinguished writer understands it. He our ticket. declares that "tariff reform is still our purpose" and opposes in strong terms the continuance and increase of a tariff tax made possible by a loose construction of the constitution during the war period. The republican effort to scare the people by "the spectre of an impossible free trade" will not work. The democratic party is pledged to no such impracticability. On the force bill Mr. Cleveland is aggressive and pointed. He sees no warrant for Federal interference in elections and will, if elected, use his efforts to stamp out the preposterous measure. Mr. Cleveland is still convinced that civil service reform is necessary to a business conduct of the government and he maintains his former position on the subject. He is for liberal pensions to deserving soldiers but insists that "our pension roll shall be a roll of honor, uncontaminated by ill desert and unvitiated by demagogic uses.' Heis for a sound currency and for one dollar being as good as another, be it gold, silver or paper. The widest liberty of the people consistent with good government is advocated and sumptuary laws of any kind opposed. The paper bears the impress of a statesman in every line and we commend its careful perusal to our readers. It is given in full on our 6th page.

JAMES J. CORBETT.

The Story of the Champion as Told by Himself.

His Early Life, Education and Surroundings - How He Came to Adopt Pugilism as a Profession -Victories Galore.

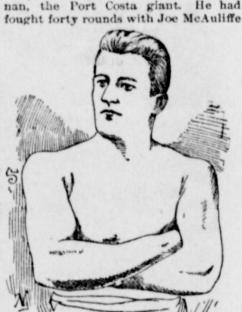

I believe it is customary to begin a biography with the date of birth. That is really a very important event in a man's life, and I don't mind saying that on September 1, 1892, I was just twentysix years old. I stand 6 feet 11/4 inches in my "stocking feet," as we put it out

I was born in the city where the setting sun glistens through golden gates at as pretty a place as there is in the universe-San Francisco. My father is Patrick J. Corbett, a man about fifty-eight years old and fully as tall as I am. He is as straight as an arrow and still a very strong and active man. It was in 1854 that he came to San Fran- friends presented the picture to Glancisco from New Orleans, to which place he had come from his Irish home at Tuame. My mother is still a young woman and as proud of all her boys and is this the only instance in which the girls as they are of her. She was married to my father in 1858, and the family consists of mother and father, Frank. Harry, Thomas, Joseph, Esther, Theresa, Kate, Mary and myself. I am the third of the boys. I received my education at Sacred Heart college, from which institution I Mr. Bisset, secwas graduated, and soon after, when about sixteen, accepted a position in the Nevada bank. At fourteen I did a great deal of boxing, but it was always in a boyish, very amateurish way, but I repeatedly bested boys older and larger than myself.

After I went into the bank I took part in many amateur club tournaments, almost invariably meeting heavy weights, although at that time I was hardly a middle weight. When I was eighteen I fought Dave Eiseman, now a pool seller, and finished him in two rounds. It was about this time that I joined the Olympic club, of which I later became boxing instructor. My first fight of any consequence was with Jack Burke, "the Irish lad," a man who had stood up before Sullivan, Mitchell, Slavin and Dempsey. The experience I had had in the amateur ring served me well in this fight, but my failing to knock Burke out was due to my great carefulness. I recognize now that I still lacked that confidence which comes with professional work. We fought eight rounds to a draw.

My next fight was with Mike Brennan, the Port Costa giant. He had and so we all thought him a strong man. I think he outweighed me twenty pounds and over, but three rounds sufficed to knock him out.

My next fight was with Capt. James Daly, and two rounds finished him. Frank Smith, of Salt Lake, succumbed to me in three rounds.

It was after this that I had my second professional fight with Joe Choynski. He weighed in at 173 and I at 169. There was big money up in the fight and both the friends of Choynski and myself had a great deal of money at stake. The fight occurred on a barge in the middle of the Sacramento river, and, as is well known, was simply a continuation of the contest that had been stopped a week before by the authorities. I broke both hands in the third round, but beyond that had hardly a scratch on my body at the end of the twenty-seventh round, when Jack Dempsey, who was back of Choynski, threw up the sponge. Shortly after that I resumed my position as instructor in the Olympic club, and left it to meet Jake Kilrain before the Southern Athletic club in a sixround tight for points for a purse of $2,500. I came out of that contest without a scratch, and could easily have finished Kilrain. The purse was awarded

I then started on my first sparring tour and on my first visit as a professional to New York. Here I bested Dominick McCaffrey in four rounds, and my friends at once arranged a fight with Peter Jackson for a purse of $10,-000. We fought sixty-one rounds, as everybody knows, and I am convinced, and so were all those at the fight, that Jackson was tired out and that I had the contest won. But, to my consternation and surprise, it was declared a draw. The decision was an outrageous one, unfair and unjust to me and to the friends who had backed me. It was really an unheard-of decision. We fought four hours. Jackson had weighed in at 204 and I at 178, and at the end Jackson had lost eight and one-then never to fight before that club again. I was very anxious to get a fight on with Charley Mitchell at this time, but couldn't draw him out.

Then came Sullivan's challenge, and, as I would not admit that he was my superior, I accepted his challenge.

A Clever Answer.

That was a bright answer which a elever society girl returned to an inquisitive admirer, who had the temerity to question her concerning her age. "Sir," she said, with an air of severe piety, "in the language of the Psalmist, "Mine age is as nothing before thee."

Freaks of vegetables, especially of turnips, radishes, parsnips and the like, have probably been observed from time to time by most people, though very rarely in such

A GERMAN EXPLORER.

Herr Otto Ehlers' Eventful Journey from Kashmir to Tonking.

Herr Otto Ehlers, the well-known German explorer, who took an important part in the delimitation of the frontier of British and German East Africa, has just completed his journey from Kashmir to Tonking. He marched from Rawal Pindi through Kashmir, the Himalaya hill states, Nepal and Kuch Behar, then through Assam, Manipur and Burma. In December last he left Moulmein, marching via Papun, Mainloungyee, Mannghat, to Chieng-Mai, the capital of Laos. From here Lieut. Ehlers intended to go to Talifu, in Yunnan, but when he arrived in Chieng-Hung he found the country in anarchy, the king having been driven away by his people on account of excessive taxation, and Chinese troops had entered the country. These troops forced Mr. Ehlers to leave the place; and as he found it impossible to get any further north he changed his plan and marched to Tonking. After twenty-five severe marches, with only one day's rest, through a very difficult and unsafe country, only accompanied by two servants, the first French post on the Black river was reached. From here the traveler marched to Laokai, a strong post on the Chinese frontier, and was escorted down from there to Hanoi, where he arrived at the end of May. Mr. Ehlers was once attacked by Chinese pirates, and is not all delighted with the reception the French gave him in Tonking. The delta of Tonking Mr. Ehlers describes as a wonderfully fertile country, which, if properly managed, would become one of the richest colonies in the east. He did his whole traveling on the back of a strong Kashmir pony, presented to him by his highness the rajah of Mundi, a neighboring state of Kashmir.

Soap as Currency. At Queretario, near Mexico, soap is the currency of the place and a legal tender for payment of debts. The cakes are about the size of the familiar brown Windsor and are each worth about three farthings. Each cake is stamped with the name of the town in which it is current and that of the person authorized to manufacture and utter it. Soap money of one town is not current in another.

Women in Louisiana.

The constitution of Louisiana permits women to hold any office connected with public education.

That Kind of Silk.

She was a sweet young thing out on a shopping expedition matching samples, and strayed innocently into the wrong fold-a big crockery store.

At first she looked around appealingly, then she approached the proprietor. "Can you match this sample of silk?" she asked, holding up a wretched little dog-eared shred between her thumb

"My dear young lady," said the suave proprietor, "this is not a dry-goods emporium. It is a china store.

"Well, this is china silk," said the sweet girl, as she dangled her sample on her finger.

LOOK OUT FOR GLANDERS

Its Symptoms as Described in a Government Report.

There is in London an outbreak of glanders so serious that in the hot weather of the middle of August all public drinking troughs in the affected districts of that city were ordered closed, greatly to the discomfort of the horses. But the end justified this, for no disease to which animals are subject is so loathsome, so contagious or so dangerous as this. It attacks all animals and man as well, the contagion spreading by means of the discharge from the nodes in the nostrils and elsewhere.

In New York city there has been an outbreak. In one week twenty-three horses were walked out of one street car company's stables and killed by officers of the board of health. The company were careless, it is said, before the health officers discovered the state of affairs in their stables, and the contagion by that time may have spread a thousand miles. In the report of the United States bureau of animal industry due space is given to this subject. In spite of what local horse doctors say, there is no permanent cure for glanders. The government's report details the symptoms of both acute and chronic glanders. The acute form is similar to the chronic, except that the symptoms are more violent. The leading features of the disease, according to the report, are as follows: In chronic glanders we have first the tubercle, which is a small node from the size of a shot to that of a small pea, which forms in the mucous membranes of the respiratory tract. This may be just inside of the wings of the nostrils or on the septum which divides the one pasal cavity from the other and be easily detected, or they may be higher in the nasal cavities on the turbinated bones, or they may form in the larynx itself or on the surface of the trachea or deep in the lungs.

The tubercles, which are first red and hard and consist of new connective tissue, soon soften and become yellow; the yellow spots break and we have a small ulcer the size of the preceding tubercle, which has a gray, dirty bottom and ragged edges, and is known as a chancre. This ulcer pours from its surface a viscous, oily discharge similar to that which we have seen in the farcy ulcer. The irritation of the discharge may ulcerate the lining muccus membrane of the nose, causing said: "Let's play Wild West show, an' I'll be the horse-thief, an' you catch me serpentine gutters with bottoms resembling an' lynch me;" an' I said: "All wight," those of the chancres themselves. If the tu-bercles have formed in large numbers we may have them causing an acute inflammation of the Schneiderian membrane, with a catarrhal discharge which may mark the specific discharge, or that which comes from the ulcers and resembles the discharge of strangles or simple inflammatory diseases. The essential symptoms of glanders are the tubercle, the chancre, the glands and the discharge. With the development of the tubercles on the respiratory tract, according to their number and the amount of eruption which they cause, we may have a cough which resembles that of a coryza, a laryngitis, a bronchitis or a broncho pneumonia, according to the location of the lesions. In chronic glanders we have the same accessory symptoms which we have in chronic farcy, the hemorrhage of the nose, the swelling of the legs, the chronic cough, and in the entire horse

Capons.

At the Smithfield (London) market recently "Surrey capons" were quoted at fowls" brought from 90 cents to $1.04. The difference between a capon and a fowl then is from fifty to sixty cents. They are both of about the same age and have eaten about the same amount of food. Shall we all rush in and raise capons for a business? Well, hardly. Would it pay you to raise all your bull calves because grown steers sell for more than bulls? It may if you have cheap food, but if you are a dairyman, buying your grain, you had better knock the calves in the head rather than try to raise them. It is so with a capon.

Some men find that it pays to twist the heads off their roosters just as soon as they can be distinguished, and unless they are caponized this is a profitable habit to get into. About the only way that when it gets its courage up to the to make caponizing profitable is to sticking point somebody always gets take advantage of the folly of somebody else. Lots of folks feed young roosters up to a crowing age, and then send them to the big cities, where they sell for about ten cents per pound, live weight-a price that will not pay for a man's time. The man who gets these roosters, caponizes them and stuffs them for a few months will make money out of it-and that is about the only way to make money from capons.-Rural New Yorker.

There is an epidemic of this disease in a car stable in New York, and it preads like wildfire. As soon as you sure a horse has glanders take him and shoot him and cremate his body. i'mis is the only sure cure.

Farmers in every state in the Union should see to it that their legislature passes, if it has not already done so, a law for protection against glanders. The state should pay an indemnity to the owner of a horse with glanders, amount. ing to about two-thirds of its value when in health. Then he should be obliged to kill the horse at once. The above is the substance of the necessary law in this respect. Some of the states have such a law already, but it is not carried out rigidly. That is as bad as having no law at all. The lamb creep or hurdle is the best of all devices for enabling the lambs to get their share of food and pasture.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

The Famous Quaker Poet and His Exemplary Life.

He Passed Away at the Ripe Age of Eighty-Four as Peacefully as He Mad Lived-Incidents in His Eventful Career.

John G. Whittier's latter years had been a beautiful ideal of old age. Long ago he laid aside the heavy cares of life to reap the reward of his labors for mankind, and, beloved of a nation and the entire English-speaking race, he waited patiently the summons to his final home. It had been his custom of late years to spend his summers at Oak Knoll and his winters at his home in Amesbury, always among the books he so dearly loved. His birthplace, near Haverhill, Mass., still stands, only a little altered from what it was in 1807. A farmer's son, born at a time when New England farm life was more frugal than it is nowadays, he had none of the opportunities for culture which Holmes and Lowell enjoyed in their youth. His parents were intelligent and upright people of limited means, who lived in the simplicity of the Quaker faith, and there was but little in his early surroundings to encourage and develop a literary taste. Whittier's only school instruction was at a district school and afterward at the Haverhill academy, where he paid for his tuition by work

It is unnecessary to quote from works so familiar to almost every reader, but sufficient to mention such legends as The Talented President of the Interna-"Skipper Ireson's Ride, "The Witch's Daughter," "Mary Garvin, "Memories," "The Playmate" and "Maud Muller." Probably the most popular quotation in poetry is the couplet from "Maud Mul-

Despite bis advanced years-he was two years older than Tennyson and twelve years the senior of Walt Whitman-he was until recently sturdy and active, and the most charming personality in the world of letters. His mental powers were keen and acute to the last. He gave but little time of late to literary effort, his eye being dimmed and his hand unsteady. His latest literary production was a poem in the Atlantic to Dr. Holmes, and the last verse he wrote was on the occasion of Dr.

Mr. Whittier never married. Between his sister Elizabeth and himself there existed the rarest and most delicate love and friendship which, doubtless, had no little to do with the poet's inspirations. His home was broken up at her death and his heart suffered in the same misfortune its greatest shock. His niece came to him at the death of Author of a Familiar Bailad. It was while returning home from Europe in 1832 that Emma Willard wrote the famous ballad: "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." In midocean a terrific storm set in and the frail ship shares all her ideas, moral, political and was tossed about by the wayes. The passengers were all badly frightened, except Miss Willard, who seemed to undergo the whole experience with a feeling of gratitude. Soon after the storm had abated she appeared in the main cabin and read the first verses of the ballad. The duc de Choiseul was among the passengers and he went into ecstasies about the piece. He prevailed upon Miss Willard to finish it. She did so, whereupon the duke set the words to music, but the air is not the familiar one known now. Emma W'lard wrote many other poems, but none ever became so popular as this one.

New Paving Material. A new material for paving is now being introduced in London. It is composed of granulated cork and bitumen pressed into blocks, which are hard like bricks or wood paving. The special advantage of the material lies in its elasticity. When used for pavement it gives a soft tread which is exceedingly pleasant, recalling the feeling of a carpet.

PICTURESQUE ENGLAND.

One of the Finest Examples of Ancient Church Architecture

St. Oswald's church at Nether Peover. Cheshire, is one of the old architectural treasures of England. It is considered the finest example of ecclesiastical black and white architecture extant. It is entirely formed of oak and plaster, and points to a time when oak trees were abundant in a district where they are now almost extinct. It was built. it is said, in 1296. It has a fine open oak roof and the supporting shafts are also of ancient oak. This is very rare, indeed, and nearly without a parallel. The tower, which is more recent than the church, is well proportioned and contains four bells. There is a fine monument to Sir Geoffrey Shakerley in this church, which recalls a very interesting event in the civil wars. On Chester walls the tower called King Charles' Tower is the place were the king witnessed the battle of Rowton Moor, a combat which had some very weighty consequences. During the battle, as we learn from Pennant, Shakerley was commissioned to leave the field and carry news of the success of the royalists to Charles, and to shorten his journey he crossed the river Dee in a tub and let his horse swim by his side. He easily reached Chester walls, and saw Charles as he was watching the battle, and offered to carry back the king's commands in a quarter of an hour in the same manner. Charles delayed. FALL PIGS.

How to Get the Most and the Best Out of Them.

If the fall pigs are to come in during September, the most desirable month, the work must be attended to early enough in the season to make calculations accurate. It is always better to have them furrowed in September than later, owing to the fact that they can then get an early start in growing to resist the cold of winter. Fall pigs can be made profitable, but in order to do this made profitable, but in order to do this content and sole agent, Stanford, Ky. Call for samples. system and method must be adopted. If in the spring they do not weigh much more than in the fall, the cost of wintering them will hardly be returned by the small additional weight. But when they get a good start in the fall, and their growing kept up right through the win-tained in the fall, for the cold weather will so hamper the young ones that they cannot grow thriftily. There will be a sheer waste then and labor lost.

The young pigs should learn to eat well before cold weather, and they should be accustomed to some regular, cheap, but strengthening, diet. They should have comfortable but economical quarters. If the trouble to give them good quarters and food is not to be taken it is better not to breed for fall

The first necessity in the proper development of the young animal is a combination of food, the digestive elements of which will furnish ample nutriment to grow the muscles, nervous tissues and bones, round out the frame and produce a healthy vital system. Fat, as such, is not wanted till after the development of the frame, and cornmeal during this period does not contain the nutriment desired. After the full development, however, there is nothing equal to corn to lay the fat on. The pigs should be weaned thoroughly, and then put upon a system of muscle and framemaking food before the fattening food is fed to them. Late in the winter and early in the spring the corn may be fed in quantity, for by that time if the pigs have grown properly they will have large, strong frames, on which fat can be laid. The joining Montrose, who was then in force tained early in the pig's life, and they

Two litters a year is all that a good sow should be required to bring forth, for if more than this is demanded it is a serious tax upon her health and strength. By careful management and breeding these two litters, one in the fall and one in the spring, can be reared successfully without too much crowding. This gives the two best seasons for securing a good start to grow with the young pig, and the best seasons to furnish for market. -E. P. Smith in American Cultivator.

The Range Cattle Industry.

The following statements concerning the range cattle industry are furnished us from a reliable source in answer to an inquiry from a correspondent, and they are of such general interest that we give them this prominence:

The total receipts of cattle for last year at the Union stock yards, Chicago, were 3,250,359, making a weekly average of 62,506. Out of the aggregated receipts it is estimated that there were 1,000,000 or thereabouts of Texas, Indian Territory and southwestern range cattle, and about 300,000 northern range cattle, the remainder-1,950,359-being

The majority of Texas cattle are fattened upon what may be termed public lands, which are divided in ownership by railroad companies who lease to different ranchmen at from four to five cents per acre per annum. A very large portion of land used for grazing purposes in Texas is owned by cattlemen. The northwestern range cattle are largely dinary woman of fifty-eight is in every fattened upon public lands, but cattlemen own a considerable portion of land which they occupy. Marshal Newland arrested Craig and brought him before Judge Carson, who recognized him in the sum of $25 and set his trial for Wednesday. He failed to appear at the time set at and the judge fined him $10. Craig is is still at large.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES He Dissects the Issues of the Day-Tariff

Taxation Unjustifiable in Times of Peace-Free Trade a Myth-The Force Bill-Currency-Pensions-Etc.

To Hon. William L. Wilson and Others, Committee etc: GENTLEMEN-In responding to your formal notification of my nomination to the presidency by the national Democracy, I hope I may be permitted to say at the outset that continued reflection and ob-servation have confirmed me in my adherence to the opinions, which I have heretofore plainly and publicly declared, touching the questions involved in the canvass.

This is a time, above all others, when these questions should be considered in the light afforded by a sober apprehension of the principles upon which our government is based, and a clear understanding of the relation it bears to the people for whose benefit it was created. We shall thus be supplied with a test by which the value of any proposition relating to the maintenance and administration of our governnance and administration of our government can be ascertained, and by which the justice and honesty of every political question can be judged. If doctrines or theories are presented which do not satisfy this test, loyal Americanism must pronounce them false and mischievous.

The protection in the exclusive use and enjoyment of their property and earnings, concededly constitutes the especial purpose and mission of our free government. This design is so interwoven with the structure of our plan of rule, that failure to protect the citizens in such use and enjoyment, or their unjustifiable diminution by the government itself, is a betrayal of the people's trust.

We have, however, undertaken to build We have, however, undertaken to build a great nation upon a plan especially our own. To maintain it and to furnish through its agency, the means for the accomplishment of national objects, the American people are willing through federal taxation to surrender a part of their earnings and income.

Tariff legislation presents a familiar form of federal taxation. Such legislation results as surely in a tax upon the daily life of our people as the tribute paid di-rectly into the hands of the taxgatherer. We feel the burden of these tariff taxes too palpably to be persuaded by any sophistry palpably to be persuaded by any sophistry that they do not exist, or are paid by foreigners. Such taxes representing a diminution of the property rights of the people are only justifiable when laid and collected for the purpose of maintaining our government, and furnishing the means for the accomplishment of its legitimate purpose and functions. This is taxation under the operation of a tariff for revenue. It accords with the professions of American cords with the professions of American free institutions and its justice and honesty answer the test supplied by a correct appreciation of the principles upon which these institutions rest.

This theory of tariff legislation manifestly enjoins strict economy in public ex-penditures and their limitation to legiti-mate public uses, inasmuch as it exhibits as absolute extortion any exaction, by way of taxation, from the substance of the peo-ple, beyond the necessities of a careful and directly encourage es the office on Lancaster street, opposite court-house. served several terms as secretary in the disturbance by selfishness and greed of patriotic sentiment, that its statement would rudely shock our people, if they had not already been insiduously allured from the safe landmarks of principle. Never have honest desire for national growth, patriotic devotion to country, and sincere regard for those who toil, been so betrayed to the support of a perpicious doctrine.

In its behalf, the plea that our infant industries should be fostered did service until discredited by our stalwart growth; then followed the exigencies of a terrible war which made our people heedless of the opportunities for ulterior schemes afforded by their willing and patriotic payment of unprecedented tribute; and now, after a long period of peace, when our overburdened countrymen ask for relief and a restoration to a fuller enjoyment of their incomes and earnings, they are met by the claim that tariff taxation, for the sake protection, is an American system, the continuance of which is necessary, in order that high wages may be paid to our workingmen and a home market be provided for our farm products.

These pretenses should no longer deceive. The truth is that such a system is directly antagonized by every sentiment of justice and fairness of which Americans are preeminently proud. It is also true that while ation increases, the workingman suffering from the importation and employment of pauper labor, instigated by his professed friends, and seeking security for his interests in organized co-operation, still waits for a division of the advantages secured to ais employer under cover of a generous soicitude for his wages, while the farmer is earning that the prices of his products are fixed in foreign markets where he suffers from a competition invited and built up y the system be is asked to support.

The struggle for unearned advantages at the doors of the government tramples on the rights of those who patiently rely upon assurances of American equality. governmental concession to clamoro favorites invites corruption in political affairs by encouraging the expenditure of money to debauch suffrage in support of a policy directly favorable to private and selfish gain. This in the end must strangle patriotism and weaken popular confidence in the rectitude of republican institutions. Though the subject of tariff legislation involves a question of markets, it also involves a question of morals. We can not with impunity permit injustice to taint the spirit of right and equity which is the life of our republic; and we shall fail to reach our national destiny if greed and selfishness lead the way.

Recognizing these truths, the national Democracy will seek by the application of just and sound principles, to equalize to our people the blessings due them from the government they support to promote among our countrymen a closer community of interests cemented by patriotism and national pride, and to point out a fair field, where prosperous and diversified American enterprise may grow and thrive in the wholesome atmosphere of American industry, ingenuity and intelligence.

Tariff reform is still our purpose. Though we oppose the theory that tariff laws may be passed having for the object the granting of discriminating and unfair governmental aid to private ventures, we wage no exterminating war against any American interests. We believe a readjustment can be accomplished, in accord ance with the principles we profess, with-out disaster or demolition. We believe out disaster or demolition. We believe that the advantages of freer raw material should be accorded to our manufacturers, and we contemplate fair and careful distribution of necessary tariff burdens rather than the precipitation of free trade

We anticipate with calmness the mis-representation of our motives and pur-poses, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its un-fair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow countrymen to reject the above. fellow countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests, and we know they cannot be frightened by the spectre of im-reannot be frightened by the spectre of impossible free trade.

The administration and management of our government depend on popular will. Federal power is the instrument of that will—not its master. Therefore the attempts of the opponents of Democracy to interfere with and control the suffrage of the state, through federal agencies develops a design, which no explanation can mitigate, to reverse the fundamental and safe relations between the people and their safe relations between the people and their government. Such an attempt can not fail to be regarded by thoughtful men as proofs of a bold determination to secure the ascendency of a discredited party in reckless disregard of a free expression of the popular will. To resist such a scheme is an impulse of Democracy. At all times and in all places we trust the people. As against a disposition to force the way to federal power, we present to them as our claim to their confidence and support, a steady championship of their rights. The people are entitled to sound and honest money abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's currency, national or state—whether gold, silver, or paper—it should be so regulated proofs of a bold determination to secure the Of fine Blue-Grass land, with good residence, barr

With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency.

In dealing with this subject no selfish scheme should be allowed to intervene and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people, arising from the deficiency or imperfect distribution of money circulation, ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered, that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation. loss that might arise from such a situation can be much easier borne than the univer-sal distress that must follow a discredited

Public officers are the agents of the peo ple. It is therefore their duty to secure for those whom they represent the best and most efficient performance of public work. This plainly can be best accomplished by regarding ascertained fitness in the selection of government employes. These considerations alone are sufficient justification for an honest adherence to the letter and spirit of civil service reform. There are, however, other features of this plan which abundantly commend it. Through its operation worther merit in every station and eration worthier merit in every station and condition of American life is recognized in reason and argument. The American people are generous and grateful; they have impressed these chargrateful; they have impressed these characteristics upon their government. Therefore all patriotic and just citizens must commend liberal consideration for our worthy veteran soldiers and for the families of those who died. No complaint should be made of the amount of public money paid to those actually disabled or made dependent by army service. But our pension roll should be a roll of honor, uncontaminated by ill desert and unvitiated by demagogic use. This is due to those whose worthy names adorn the roll, and to all our people who delight to honor the brave and the true. It is also due to those who in years to come should be allowed to hear, reverently and lovingly, the story of American patriotism and fortitude, illustrated by can patriotism and fortitude, illustrated by our pension roll. The preferences accorded to veteran soldiers in public employment should be secured to them honestly and without evasion, and when capable and worthy, their claim to the helpful regard and gratitude of their countrymen should be ungrudgingly acknowledged.

be ungrudgingly acknowledged. The assurance to the people of the ut-most individual liberty consistent with ple of our government. This gives no sanction to vexatious sumptuary laws which unnecessarily interfere with such habits and customs of our people as are not offensive to a just moral sense and are not inconsistent with good citizenship and the public welfare. The same principle re-quires that the line between the subjects which are properly within governmental control and those which are more fittingly left to parental regulation should be carefully kept in view. An enforced education, wisely deemed a proper preparation for citizenship, should not involve the impair-ment of wholesale parental authority nor do violence to the household conscience. Paternalism in government finds no approval in the creed of Democracy. It is a symptom of misrule, whether it is manifested in unauthorized gifts or by unwar-ranted control of personal and family

Our people, still cherishing the feeling of human fellowship which belonged to our beginning as a nation, require their government to express for them their sympathy with all the strength of the sympathy with all those who are oppressed under rule less free than ours. A generous hospitality, which is one of the most prominent of our national characteristics, prompts us to welcome the worthy and industrious of all lands to homes and citizenship among us. This hospitable sentiment is not violated, however, by careful and reasonable regulations for the protection of public health, nor does it justify the reception of immigrants who have no appreciation of our institutions and whose presence among us is a menace

tion; and they will not be inclined to condone any neglect of effort on the part of their government to insure in the grandeur of this event a fitting exhibit of American growth and greatness, and a splendid demonstration of American patriotism.

In an imperfect and incomplete manner I have thus endeavored to state some of the things which accord with the views and intentions of the party to which I have given my lifelong allegiance. My attempt has not been to instruct my countrymen nor my party, but to remind both that Democratic doctrine lies near the principles of our government and tends to promote the people's good. I am willing to be accused of addressing my countrymen upon right topics and in homely fashion, for I believe that important truths are found on the surface of thought, and that they should be stated in direct and simple terms. Though much is left unwritten, my record as a public servant leaves no excuse for misunderstanding my belief and position on the questions which are now presented to the voters of the land for their decision.

Called for the third time to represent the supremacy of Democratic principles, my grateful appreciation of its confidence less than ever effaces the solemn sense of my responsibility.
